Defense Not Ready

In answer to Judge Wood, Darrow said the defense was not ready to go to make a qualification that the defense was as ready as it could ever be in circumstances where the case of the state was withheld from it. He said that in all other respects the defense was ready. Richardson responded briefly to the argument of Borah, said counsel for the state made no distinction in his arguments between overt acts which the state would seek to show against the prisoners and the evidence by which it would seek to show commission of the alleged overt acts. Defense wished to know what overt acts were.

Borah closed the discussion with spirited speech in which he demanded secreey in obtaining witnesses, instancing the loss of two witnesses in Colorado yesterday. He disavowed a de-sire for any man's blood unjustly, but avowed the purpose of the state to

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS AT SEVENTY.

The first day of March marks the seventieth birthday of William Deas Howells, sometimes called "Dean" of American letters. Mr. Howells is still hard at work. He lives in New York, his home overlooking Central park. He was born at Martin's Ferry, O., and educated in his father's printing office, where he learned to set type before he was ten years old. In his early manhood Mr. Howells went to Boston, at that time the literary center of the United States. He has published nearly fifty books, most of them novels. He is the leading exponent of realism in fiction, but all his works are clean and wholesame.
